

Tell Them the Good News

CHERYL KAYE WISNER'S MONTHLY UPDATE

MAY 2015

Dear Family and Friends,

“Rachel” had an abortion and the scars from that decision linger. “Shelby” was raped by her step-brother and has not told anyone in her family. “Abby” was born to a Russian prostitute and then adopted in the United States. She was actually adopted twice because her first family was abusive. “Chris” was planning to be a worship pastor, but he rejected his faith as a senior in high school because he didn’t think he had good evidence for his beliefs.

“Sam” is a philosophy student who spends his time promoting counter-apologetics (aiming to unravel Christian beliefs). “Kevin” watched his best friend die. He clings to hope that maybe God exists and that there is a good reason for all of his pain.

We have the opportunity to tell them the Good News; the news of healing, forgiveness, and answers found in Jesus.

I prayed with this student at Wichita State University.

These stories represent real people in real situations. In our work on college campuses, the Justice For All (JFA) team often talks with hurting students like those represented in these stories. I meet many students who have heavy things weighing on them that need someone who will listen to them. They need someone who will share the truth in love.

Not only do those of us at JFA have productive conversations about abortion and then train JFA volunteers to do the same, we also have amazing opportunities to meet people and reach out to them where they are. They know the bad news about life’s challenges and the pain that surrounds them. We have great opportunities to tell them the Good News; the news of healing, forgiveness, and the answers found in Jesus.

God has provided me with many opportunities to share with people why I believe abortion is wrong and why I think that Jesus is who He says He is. The opportunities are everywhere, not just on a college campus.

“Am I making the most of the opportunities given to me? Am I seeking out those opportunities?” These are questions that I ask myself frequently. I encourage you to ask yourself those questions, too. I know it can seem scary to speak out. I also know, though, that if we don’t speak, the consequences could lead to physical and eternal death. We only have a short time here on earth. May God find us faithful!
