

Not Tasks Accomplished... Faces. Stories.

CHERYL KAYE WISNER'S MONTHLY UPDATE

LATE SUMMER 2016

Dear Family and Friends,

These past four years that I have spent at Justice For All have been some of the most formative of my life. As I reflect on this time of laboring to end abortion and share the love of Jesus, I do not see a list of tasks accomplished – instead, I see faces of people that I've met. I hear their stories replaying in my mind. I praise God again for the work I saw Him do around me. Yes, this is what I will remember. I will remember the work of God in the people I was given the gift of loving. And I will remember how that changed me for the better. See pictured on the next page three young women I met at Colorado State University in April – I will remember them.

Recently, I discerned that it is time for me to step away from working at JFA. This decision has been a hard one in which I have had to seek much counsel and rely heavily on the trustworthiness of God. I will always be supportive of the mission of training thousands to make abortion unthinkable for millions, one person at a time, and I hope to continue to volunteer with JFA in the future.

I want to take this time to thank you, my prayer partners and financial supporters. I could not have invested myself like I have the last four years had it not been for your care for me as a person. In large part, you are the reason that I have hundreds of faces, names, and stories in my mind. You are the reason that I am now able to defend my view on abortion and Truth to those who doubt because I've had the opportunity to practice at JFA over and over again. I can't say thank you enough for coming alongside me to make all of this possible.

The team at JFA will continue to update you about JFA's work, and I ask that you continue to support JFA in the future. I suggest you consider supporting my friend and fellow JFA trainer Jon Wagner (who is also married to my dear friend Corinn) or the new Intern Scholarship Fund at JFA. See www.jfaweb.org/ck-wisner-support-suggestions for some personal thoughts about both designations. Thank you for your support of my work and the mission of JFA! Note that what is left of the funds that have been given to support my JFA work will be used to help pay for my future JFA trips or to help other JFA staff members do the same work I did at JFA: training pro-life advocates and creating dialogue with pro-choice advocates at outreach events.

As for my future plans, I will be spending the next few months in Colorado working at Summit's fall program, Summit Semester. I have thoroughly enjoyed my time working at the Summit Summer program, and I am happy to continue to serve Summit for the time being. The opportunity to work at Summit Semester came shortly after my decision to end my time with JFA. I am amazed and thankful for how God provides our next steps right when we need them!

In some ways, I'm not sure how to conclude this – my last JFA newsletter. I think I want to conclude with you knowing two things: first, you are loved by me, but most importantly by God. Secondly, may God receive all of the glory for the great things He has done!

Onward and Upward,

P.S. Don't forget to check out one final JFA story from me on the next page! Would you consider placing it on your refrigerator as a reminder to pray with me this month for these girls and all of the people I've spoken to during JFA outreaches?

The JFA team: I love these people!

“Would You Like to Color with Me?”

We turned some of the Art of Life Exhibit panels* into coloring pages and then set up a coloring station. That quickly became my new favorite spot to start conversations at our outreach event. (I’ve asked many questions in front of Justice For All exhibits, but “Would you like to color with me?” was new.) My second conversation that took place at our coloring station was with three high school girls who were just visiting Colorado State University for the day. As we added our own unique spin on classic pieces of art, I learned about their views on abortion. At the beginning of the conversation, one of the three girls was pro-life, but by the end of the conversation all three girls were pro-life! My favorite part of the conversation happened when I talked to the girls about how we have equal rights because we are human and how the unborn should have the same equal rights because she is human as well. With wide eyes the girls looked at me, and one of them exclaimed, “Well, I guess I have to be pro-life now!”
