

Four Years Later: Partnership Still Thriving

Fellowship Christian School (FCS) in Roswell, GA is a consistently amazing connection.

No matter how many flights or long drives I take for our ministry, I will never tire of seeing students learn how to graciously defend life and share truth. Working with students across the United States has become a major highlight for me. Although the students see our program as a new and challenging experience for them, the majority are open to learning the principles, committing to pray, and striving to balance truth and love to reach their neighbors (in this case, college students).

FCS students engaged Georgia State University students about abortion in April.

My beautiful wife, Corinn (center), participated in the GSU outreach.

In April we completed our 4th year of partnering with FCS, and we are thrilled that our partnership will continue to blossom in the coming year. This most recent event included our Abortion: From Debate to Dialogue seminar on their north Atlanta campus and an outreach event at Georgia State University, located in downtown Atlanta.

Below are just a few of the testimonies and responses from this stellar group of FCS students.

“It was great! I feel prepared to talk to almost anyone with different views than me... I got to share my faith with a stranger for the first time.” - Jacqueline

“(The seminar was) super informative and provided solid ways of respectfully, yet powerfully presenting the pro-life platform.” - Morgan

“I now feel fully equipped to explain and justify my stance on abortion. It would be great if you could come to my church” - Olivia

“My mind was totally changed from being in-different to (passionately) pro-life.” - Susanna
