

August 18, 2008

To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to write in support of David Lee and the ministry Justice for All. This ministry has impacted college and university campuses for several years now, and I believe the fruits of that impact are being seen – namely in young children who are now alive that wouldn't otherwise. There are other impacts and here at the Focus on the Family Institute, we see that transformation each semester as we partner with JFA.

For several years David and his team have come for a full day of training in pro-life apologetics. This training is then followed up with two days of practical application as our 88 students accompany the exhibit to a local university or college. Each semester we stand back and watch these students figure out what it looks like to share the Truth in Love, something that is a challenge for young Christians these days. I have watched students feel the tug of the Holy Spirit as they minister to someone who is obviously hurting from their own wounds of abortion. They talk calmly with some very upset people. They love in word, action and tone of voice.

I am grateful that David and the ministry have developed and worked hard to maintain a partnership with FFI. The Kingdom of God is well served in this incredibly important matter.

As long as God makes this relationship available we will continue to support and partner with JFA – watching God's hand work in the lives of young people.

Sincerely,

Chris M. Leland, Ph.D.

Executive Director of College Student Ministry and Senior Fellow for Christian Worldview Studies
Focus on the Family Institute
Chris.leland@fotf.org