civilize the conversation

We can’t have a real, productive conversation about this until we acknowledge that most pro-choice people love children and most pro-life people love women. What we disagree on is definitions. Virtually no one thinks it’s okay to murder babies, but if a fetus is not defined as a baby or an individual then pro-life people seem heartless. Virtually no one thinks it’s okay to force a woman to do something with/ to her body against her will, but if a fetus is not defined as part of a woman’s body but a person, pro-choice people seem heartless.

Now let’s talk! Recognizing what you and I can disagree about this definition + both be loving people! Let’s talk science!

- listen to understand
- ask questions with an open heart
- find common ground when possible
