

An Invitation to Partner with Me

EVA GABINO'S JFA UPDATE

October 2026

Dear Friend,

I've felt inspired to advocate for the sanctity of human life since high school, and now I have a clarified direction and vision about how I can use my gifts to serve God and love my neighbor in this way. In June of this year, I started a full-time internship with Justice For All (JFA), a national education and outreach ministry that equips Christians to stand up against the injustice of abortion. Now I feel even more convicted and equipped to defend the rights of the unborn and to help others do the same. I'm energized for this next step in defending the rights of the vulnerable and would love for you to jump in with me.

JFA's mission is to train thousands to make abortion unthinkable for millions, one person at a time. Our team travels to college campuses nationwide to engage people of various perspectives in conversations and help them change their minds. I've been able to participate as a trainer and speaker in a number of interactive JFA workshops so far, and I've also participated in several days of outreach events on four college campuses in Colorado and Texas.

I had a conversation with a student named Ilhud last month. It's an illustration of why I'm so hopeful and confident about the impact all of us can have simply by starting a conversation. At first, Ilhud believed that abortion should be legal because the unborn is "just a clump of cells." I challenged his views respectfully using my JFA training, and he reconsidered his position. By the end of our conversation, Ilhud agreed that the unborn is a valuable human being that possesses the same basic right to life that you and I have!

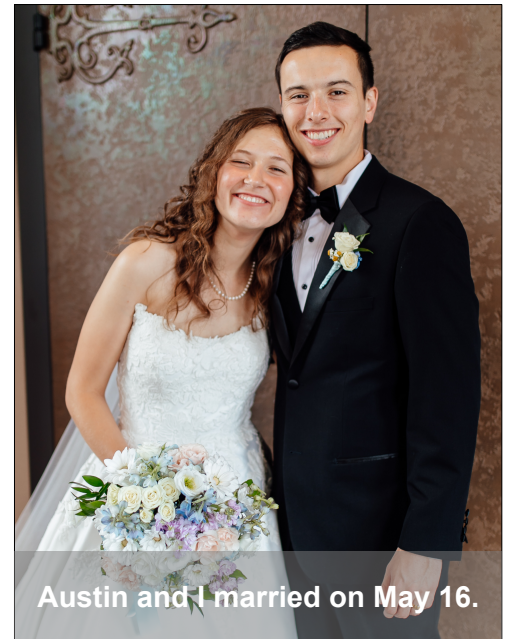

The Lord broke my heart about the tragedy of abortion my freshman year of high school when I listened to the testimonies of women who had had an abortion and are healing. That year, I interviewed two women who had their own experiences with crisis pregnancies and who chose life in the face of challenges, such as a prenatal microcephaly diagnosis and being a freshman in college. My care and love for women and men in similar situations grew through this process.

Although I didn't know what I wanted to major in when I was applying to Texas A&M University, I knew that I wanted to be part of the campus pro-life club, Pro-Life Aggies. Over the years, I served as fundraising director and president. I had many opportunities to engage in conversations about abortion with students at Texas A&M.

You may know that I graduated from Texas A&M University (whoop!) in May and married my husband, Austin, a week and a half later. During that time, I was offered an opportunity to apply for an internship with JFA, and I began my internship in June. In just a few months, my desire to advocate for justice for the unborn has grown more urgent, and my understanding of the issues surrounding abortion has deepened. I feel particularly devoted to this work because I believe that each of us has a unique opportunity to help our loved ones consider their views on abortion and inspire them to advocate for the unborn.

I'm convinced that JFA's relational approach to conversations about abortion is what most people need in order to start making an impact. Convictions are important, but they don't produce fruit without action. More than 1.1 million unborn children were killed by abortion in the U.S. in 2025 (jfa1.org/facts). It is critical that Christians go beyond just having a conviction. They can share the truth about abortion and the value of the unborn with love for those who disagree. We don't just have two options with this issue, to be silent or unloving. JFA seeks to develop Christians into advocates who are gracious, bold, and articulate. The process starts in workshops hosted by churches, ministries, and pro-life groups. Then it continues when we take those same people to college campuses for outreach, which helps them gain competence in talking to non-Christians and others who disagree, as well as giving confidence on the specific topic of abortion.

Consider what these recent trainees said:

"The Lord truly took away my fear to talk to people about such a hard topic. I found that as time went on I was able to see people as humans and not just a problem; and their disagreement as an opportunity rather than a stumbling block or argument to win. The Lord gave me a confidence I haven't had before to discuss abortion/faith, and I am very encouraged to continue to discuss it with people. I realized the importance of listening." -Emmaline

"I felt so prepared by JFA's training, and I was able to walk into outreach with confidence. I think it is so important that we get this training to as many believers as possible to adequately prepare and equip God's soldiers to do His work." - Gunner

How You Can Help

I'm thrilled to jump into my new role with JFA, and with your help I can fully devote myself to the task of training Christians to create conversations that we trust God will use to save lives, change hearts, and heal wounds. Would you prayerfully consider being part of my journey as I continue to stand for justice as an ambassador for Christ?

My goal is to raise $5,000 per month for my full-time position with JFA. Pledges of regular support (monthly, quarterly, annual, etc.) and special gifts both help me to reach this goal. To support my work, you can go to jfa1.org/donate to set up an automatic recurring gift or to give a special gift using a credit card or electronic bank draft. You can also send in the enclosed pledge form or call the JFA office (316.683.6426) for help giving over the phone.

I plan to contact you in the coming weeks to see if you would be interested in partnering with me, to answer any questions you have regarding my work with Justice For All, and to invite you to join a special group of people committed to praying regularly for my work. Thank you for considering how you can partner with me. I greatly appreciate you.

In Christ,

Eva Gabino

My JFA Job at a Glance
